Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions (SDG 16)

Azerbaijan University actively contributes to Sustainable Development Goal 16: Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions by promoting inclusive education, civic responsibility, and democratic values. Through its academic offerings in political science, and international relations, the university provides students with a solid foundation in principles of justice, human rights, and good governance.

The institution fosters a culture of dialogue, mutual respect, and critical thinking by encouraging open discussions on legal systems, social equity, conflict resolution, and institutional integrity. By creating a safe space for debate and analysis, Azerbaijan University empowers students to become informed and active citizens who are prepared to contribute to a peaceful and inclusive society.

In addition to academic learning, the university organizes seminars, public lectures, and student forums focused on current global and national issues. These events promote awareness of the rule of law, transparency, and ethical leadership, all of which are essential for building strong institutions.

Azerbaijan University also encourages student participation in civic and social initiatives, reinforcing values such as accountability, justice, and fairness. Through its holistic approach to education and community engagement, the university plays an important role in shaping future leaders committed to upholding peace and justice at both the local and global levels.
